Danny White speaks at Hall of Fame Dinner

SGA Elections

For the past few years, Trevecca Nazarene College, in cooperation with other sponsors, has been able to provide the Trevecca community with an outstanding event. This year, in cooperation with the sports medicine center at Baptist Hospital, the Trevecca T-Club sponsored the 1994 Hall of Fame dinner. The special speaker for this event was former Cowboy Danny White.

Joel Moore, Danny White and Juan Arroyo, Trevechoes Editor

The Dallas Cowboys, in 1974, drafted Danny White after he set new records for the NCAA. Danny White joined the Cowboys in 1976 as a punter and backup quarterback. White set team records with 3,980 yards and 29 touchdown passes as Dallas went to the playoffs for the ninth year in a row.

Mr. White addressed the Trevecca community with a very motivational message. Danny White expressed that success depends on being in the right place, working hard, and surrounding oneself with good people. After telling witty stories about his teammates and the special times he shared with the Cowboys, he expressed the importance of teamwork. He said, "Life is a team sport in which nobody succeeds or fails alone."

His interaction with the audience was very effective. In the midst of laughter and enjoyment, Mr. White also shared the lessons he has learned in his successful life. "Victory in the football field did not bring true happiness, occasionally a smile..." As Tom Landry believed, Mr. White also thinks that winning is not everything and "setting records is temporary", but champions emerge when things are tough.

Danny made a very strong impact among the Trevecca students present in this event. Patrick Conger said, "I was thoroughly impressed by the motivational words of Danny White. I also enjoyed watching Avery get inducted into the Hall of Fame since I watched him play here for four years." Patrick was one of the many representatives

The Student Government Association successfully organized the 1994 SGA elections. With a newly developed system and careful organization, the elections procedure flowed smoothly. Jenni Pennell and Michelle Foster took charge of this process and successfully brought it to a completion.

In the past years, the election procedure was not very consistent. Students had the opportunity to vote in chapel, but the control over the ballots was not very effective. With the new sticker system, ballot control is more effective and efficient. Another addition to the election procedure consisted of individual voting booths. In these booths, the voter had the opportunity to see the pictures of the candidates and their mission statements. One last addition to the new procedure was the "Kiss Me, I Voted" sticker.

These changes increased the student participation in the SGA elections. Every candidate was required to give a speech as the tradition commande. In addition the candidates were

Campus Improvement--A Student's Perspective

by Phil Rice

As I walk across campus, lost in a trance brought about by the glaring sun, an agitated cry awakens me from my stupor. I start and turn to the source, a fellow student. She is moaning something about "the environment" and "barbarism" and pointing down into the quad. I follow her gaze to a limbless giant standing on the lawn. The great tree once reached higher than any of the buildings that surrounded it, and it had probably made the acquaintance of Trevecca's first graduating class. Now it looks helplessly at those same arms that once scraped the sky, lying severed beside him on the lawn, ready to satisfy a hungry fireplace or fulfill a landscaper's mulch needs.

The environmentalist in me jumps up in fury, and then returns to his seat when he remembers how many pencils and paper products I myself use. It's funny, but we all had the same reaction to the first generous trimming of the campus trees; but you have to admit, the campus really does look better. In the quad area especially, the improvement of visibility is something that even the strongest opposers should notice.

But do we as students have a right to even question the judgment of those in leadership at the school? It seems that none of the people making these decisions are paying a single cent to be at Trevecca; rather, their decisions apply to other people's money...namely, OURS! Perhaps, since all full-time students here at Trevecca invest (in one way or another) at least $5000.00 a semester in this school, and every student invests some money to be here, maybe we should think of Trevecca as a corporation, with each and every student as a shareholder. Looked at in this light, students have every right to ask questions and to be a force in the decision-making process. Sometimes, a student who questions is treated like a young punk kid, or at least an inferior being. This attempt at deference and implied verbal abuse is usually a good sign that you are asking the right questions. Remember, each of us student "shareholders" is paying the salary of the people in authority. We are all customers; shouldn't we be

New Start; same Quality, Service and Harmony

Well, this semester of change and reorganization here at the Trevechoes office is drawing to a close. Thanks to Juan and the rest of the team, we have gotten this newspaper off to a good start, a process I hope will continue into next year. As the editor for the 1994-1995 school year, I hope to continue to establish the Trevechoes newspaper as a paper of quality and content—and one that has more than one issue per semester! I believe that we can have a successful paper here at Trevecca, a paper we can be proud to have representing our school to the neighboring community. This is my commitment, and, I hope, yours as well. As always, the door is open to aspiring writers, cartoonists, photographers, and anyone else looking to join our team. I thank you for your help and support this year, and look forward to serving and working with you in the year to come.

Kris Smerick,

treated that way? What would happen to a business in the real world that made an "administrative decision" that adversely affected its customers, and then replied to their complaints with an attitude of "if you don't like it, leave!" No, in the same way that businesses respect their customers, every student here deserves to be treated without condescension.

So, why exactly is there a silently fuming opposition to this campus improvement thing? Let's take a look at what's been done. There are new campus maps stationed here and there, but they are in untrafficked areas, and are impossible to view at night. We already mentioned the tree trimming, which was drastic but had its pluses. There were also four new expensive leather chairs added to the chapel lobby (probably donated). What is the point of burgundy leather chairs? Was it just coincidence that they were put in place right when the Board of Trustees was due to arrive?

We are all grateful for the remarkable transformation of Benson Auditorium. And surely no one can complain about the resources now at our fingertips at "Robo-library". These are all praiseworthy improvements.

Maybe the frustration comes from going back to the dim cave dwellings that we call our dormitories and having to mop up the new roof leaks or chisel the mold culture out of the sink or tell the person three floors up to please think a little softer because the walls and floors have no insulation. Face it, the living conditions are pathetic. And what commuter students ever have an easy time finding a parking space? There aren't enough spaces for cars; it's like playing musical chairs, and if you're the unfortunate one who's out when the music stops, then you have to park in an unmarked space (gasp! wheeze! choke!) Yes, an unmarked space. (But, hey, what would security have to do with themselves if there weren't parking

The Africa Experience

by Kris Smerick

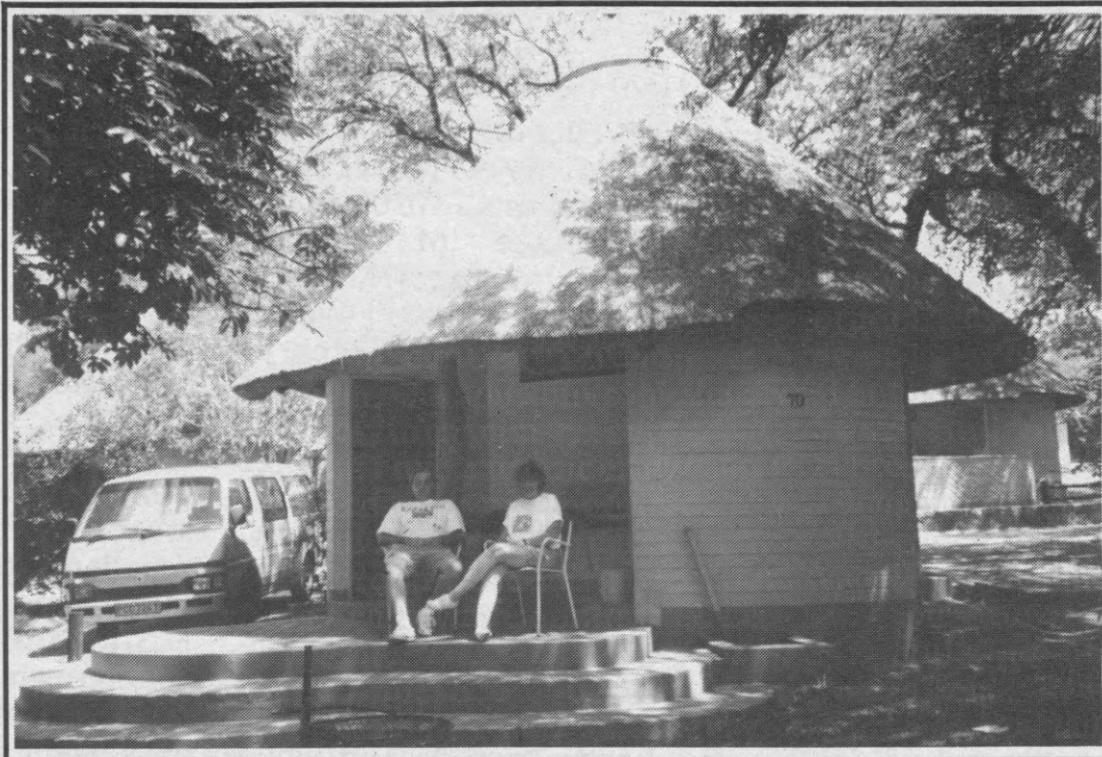

Two of Trevecca's students took time out of the busy spring semester to put into action the concept of serving and ministering to others. Missy and Sean Poloskey traveled to Swaziland, Africa, February 9 through 19 to help build a clinic and hold Vacation Bible School for the town of Manzini and the village of Bulunga.

Sean and Missy belong to Parkview Church of the Nazarene in Ohio, a church whose focus is upon missionary work throughout the year. Missy's father, Chuck Hail, was in charge of this particular trip, and through generous donations by members of the church, was able to have a group of 32 travel to Africa. The group was made up of laypersons in the church, including seven who were doctors, nurses, or pharmacists, thus forming a medical team to give the Africans the medical attention they needed. Thirty suitcases traveled along with the group, containing medical supplies and toys for the children.

Once in Swaziland, part of the group built a clinic on land donated by the Chief of the village, while the medical team, Missy, and her mother, Brenda Hail, ran the Vacation Bible School and the clinic on alternating days.

A clinic was desperately needed in the Bulunga area, because it is an hour's ride from the village to the nearest hospital, and the bus only stops by twice a week. The pervading influence of the local witch doctors also has a hold over the people, even the Christians. With a clinic in the village, staffed by student nurses from the mission school, the locals will be able to get medical help in time.

Missy and Sean are very thankful for the experience. Missy commented, "I would love to live there! We feel called to do something in missions, and God keeps opening doors." On the trip itself, she said, "The locals were very thankful, and incredibly friendly! They were also very generous with their time and food."

One of the more dramatic experiences of the trip was the two-day ceremony the locals held in the group's honor. They were so thankful that they presented the group with a beast (an ox) from the Chief's own herd. They proceeded to kill the beast in front of the group, skin it, and cook it! Although the cultural shock was profound, the group understood the great honor they were bestowed, and were appreciative.

Many who return from missions trips claim to have been ministered to as much as they ministered, and Missy and Sean are no exception. The friendships established over cultural and linguistic barriers served to enrich the lives of everyone involved. Although returning with 30 empty suitcases, Missy and Sean perhaps came back with more than when they left.

A Communicator With Style

Prof. Lena Welch

by Kris Sanford

with her dissertation at the University of Massachusetts in Amhurst. Through the influence of several instructors at TNC while still in college, Welch decided on a career in teaching. "I knew I could enjoy that (teaching) and hopefully could encourage students to be as intrigued about it (communications) as I was," added Welch.

Rising standards in the work force has made the need for a Bachelors Degree increasingly more important for survival. College is an institution to prepare students for the "real world" by enhancing knowledge. To come to college is to not only further education, but to gain new friendships, relationships, and, unfortunately, new problems. Through the use of instructors as advisors, Trevecca has tried to eliminate some of the stress, and has created relationships between students and their mentors. Just ask Lena Welch, a Communications instructor. "(Advising) is beneficial to the students and it's beneficial to the faculty. All of us have a need to belong somewhere...and advising is that one moment that the faculty knows your name and cares..."

Like most instructors, Lena Welch accredits the rewards of her job to "working with students... hands down." And while instructors offer that extra energy and enthusiasm many students need to complete the difficult years of college, the students have to help themselves as well. "Love the area you're in," declares Welch, "...be inquisitive about it."

While Welch's teaching has made her well-known and respected to communications students, much of the campus recognizes Welch for her public speaking ability and accomplishments which have been shown in chapel services and classes. When asked what she works on most with public speaking, Welch replied, "I hope I have a good rapport with people." Hard work, dedication, and a genuine friendliness with students and audiences has made Lena Welch a well-respected name on Trevecca's campus.

Lena (Hegi) Welch graduated from Trevecca in 1981. She received her Masters in Communication from Auburn University in Alabama in 1983, and is currently all but finished

ECSAC: Cultural Club

by Don Kintner

Cultural diversity is an interesting facet of the TNC community. A large range of students from a variety of national, ethnic, racial, and cultural backgrounds live, work, study, and worship here, and each adds to the colorful cultural mosaic of the Trevecca community. To enable students to increase their knowledge, understanding, and awareness of various cultures and to celebrate the cultural diversity that is present on campus, our Ethnic and Cultural Student Affairs Committee has been created. Spontaneously conceived as a result of Professor Don Kintner's continual encouragement to students in his Minority Group Relations class to "challenge our comfort zones in order to increase our understanding and appreciation each other as humans", ECSAC consists of students and faculty who share a commitment to making a difference so far as intercultural and interracial relations are concerned. Already excitement has been evident as the group has met to get organized, establish organizational purpose and priorities, and to elect officers.

The purpose of ECSAC comprises the following:

- *To increase an awareness and understanding between cultural, ethnic, and racial groups on campus, so that improved relationships between groups will result.
- *To reach out in service and ministry to the ethnic and cultural communities in the Nashville area.
- *To provide a support system for ethnically and culturally diverse TNC students and to assist them in their adjustment to the Trevecca community.
- *To provide educational programs and forums regarding matters related to ethnic relations and cultural diversity in order to heighten awareness and appreciation for the cultural variety represented in the TNC campus community.
- *To serve as a liaison to the Minority Affairs and Affirmative Action Faculty Committee on matters that arise related to campus ethnic issues and concerns.
- *To assist in formulating recruitment strategies targeting ethnically and culturally diverse populations on the southeast educational zone of the Church of the Nazarene.

It may not be possible to change the world individually, but together it may be possible to make a difference and have a positive influence in the lives of others. Anyone interested in finding out more about ECSAC call Don Kintner at ext. 1605 or Brad Rideout at ext. 1603. Come be a part of a group that's making a difference!

Student Service Plan

by Maureen Goodman

In a White House ceremony [in March], President Clinton signed into law his hard-fought National and Community Service Trust Act of 1993 which allows students to pay back educational loans by spending a year of their lives tackling such pressing problems as health care, education, public safety and the environment.

The establishment of a national service plan, often described as a domestic Peace Corps, was a repeated promise in Clinton's campaign speeches and became one of his most consistent causes for applause while stumping on the campaign trail.

Clinton has referred to the service plan as "a defining initiative" of his administration, and he has worked particularly hard to guide the bill through Congress this summer.

A sense of celebration pervaded on the South Lawn of the White House during the signing ceremonies. Inside

Trevecca has joined efforts with local businesses and property owners to form the Murfreesboro Road Neighborhood Association. Original efforts focused on eliminating crime in the area. The Association has also been working with the Metro

Beautification and Environment Commission to establish a Clean-Up Day and coordinate beautification efforts. Saturday, April 23, from 8:00 a.m. until noon, has been set as the Clean-Up Day. Headquarters for the event will be the lot beside Channel 2 at the corner of Murfreesboro Road and Parris Avenue, and a Continental breakfast will be available at 8:00 a.m. The Beautification Commission will provide gloves, hats, trash bags, and a free T-shirt to all who participate. Channel 2 is also anticipating providing television coverage for the event. Trevecca is responsible for cleaning the following areas: Factory Street, Lester Avenue, and Murfreesboro Road from Lester Avenue to Waller Buick. Any and all interested organizations, clubs, and students are invited to participate—the Basketball team has already committed to the effort. It will be a great time to join efforts with local businesses and property owners to improve the neighborhood. Please contact Student Services, ext. 1245, if interested and available, so work efforts can be coordinated.

violations to create?) The squalid dorms and the bursting parking lots are screaming for the attention of campus improvement. Why are the cries put off?

The answer seems to have disconcerting implications, for it reveals the philosophy that underlies the direction which campus improvement has taken. From all that has been done, apparently it is very important for the campus to SEEM a certain way. The outer appearance is meticulously polished to appease influential bodies of persons like the Board, and to attract prospective students with the appearance of excellence. What the campus may BE is entirely another story, another neglected story.

In short, what does this "young punk" see going on underneath campus improvement?

Ray Richards: Magic Money Man

by Steve Roderick

Ray Richards is a man that carries one title and wears many hats. Just one of his many roles as Vice President of Financial Affairs ties into the accounting function of the Business office, which handles all funds brought into and expended by the college. Besides monthly monitoring of annual budgets, Mr. Richards also "wears the hat" of personnel director for staff personnel which includes the Bookstore, Post office, and computer center. He humbly describes his job as one that consists of no regular set schedule. Often times problems arise that need immediate attention, which makes it a job of reaction, rather than action. Mr. Richards graduated from Olivet Nazarene College in 1955. He worked for U.S. Steel until 1966, then worked three years as an industrial consultant for Arthur Young & Co. In 1969, Mr. Richards came to Trevecca and spent three years on Trevecca's campus in the business management department. He then left Trevecca to become the business manager at Bethany Nazarene College and also spent time in the healthcare field.

Mr. Richards was recruited in 1991 by Dr. Reed, and after careful prayer and thought, the Richards decided to return to Trevecca. Their return was motivated by the fact that Trevecca was in financial trouble. Mr. Richards has used his previous work experiences as an industrial engineer to become Trevecca's efficiency expert. Mr. Richards speculates that by the end of this June, Trevecca will have risen out of the debt that it was in when he arrived here in 1991. He believes that the last three years have been great financially for Trevecca, and equally as great in his own journey.

At the conclusion of this semester, Ray Richards will once again bid farewell to Trevecca. Upon retirement he plans to move back to Oklahoma. He expressed mixed emotions about retiring, but added that he will continue to work part time at Southern Nazarene University. Retirement, he said with a smile, will give him an opportunity to spend time with his grandchildren, and on the golf course.

Today, Trevecca's financial base is excellent and "The years ahead can be exciting years." If one analyzed Trevecca's financial statement today he or she would see that Trevecca has moved into a strong financial position, in large part due to what has been done in the last three years. (Ray Richards doesn't give himself enough of the credit he deserves for this.)

Mr. Richards suggested that future TNCers analyze the cost of state schools compared to the cost of Trevecca. Many people do not realize that state school tuition is usually cheaper, but room and board along with other necessities are usually more expensive than here at Trevecca.

Mr. Richards really appreciates the student body here. "The students have been warm and friendly. I have always been pleased with the spirit, morale, and spirituality that goes on here at Trevecca." Mr. Richards will be watching with great interest as Trevecca develops because Trevecca's best years are yet to come.

Rotaract Service

by Kris Sanford

To the members of Rotaract, the real meaning of service has not so much to do with the physical aspect, but with spiritual growth through ministry and witnessing.

Under the sponsorship of Rotary International, Rotaract, which now supports fourteen members, has grown to a respected name on campus through several activities including an annual variety show and Gong show. This school term, the organization has been involved in working the concession stands at the gym during basketball games, and the Smyrna Air Show last fall. In conjunction with Civinettes (Civitanes), Rotaract co-sponsored The Price Is Right show to benefit a high school student who was struck by lightning.

Rotaract has been a chartered club at Trevecca for seven years, and has always had the same purpose—to serve. "If a club's main purpose wasn't to serve and it was just a social gathering every week, then we would not be accomplishing anything," responded Rotaract president Robert Bates.

While service is most definitely a part of every club on campus, there is still the desire to have a good time socially, and that has not been forgotten by Rotaract. But as Bates put it, "I think clubs need to have fun, but they need to be aware of the problems on their campus, or in their community...if we're not aware, then we're not up to date."

Trevecca's Hired Guns

press release

It has been a four-year building process to get the barrels loaded. The 1994 Baseball Team, according to Coach Altopp, is the best team he has ever put on a field. This year, the Trojans boast a roster of nine seniors and six juniors. Not one freshman will be in the starting line-up to start the season, and that is a change from the past. "It's all about building a program and having 'class' kids that can play," says Coach Altopp. "We took our lumps with freshmen, and now we are playing with experience. You just can't substitute experience and maturity."

Bost are also key pitchers who will help determine the success of the Trojans.

The Trojan offense is continuing to get stronger every year as confidence and maturity grow. This year will be no exception as seniors Jim Hood, Shawn Kivell, Chuck Yarbrough, and Kevin Shorter look to lead the team. Yarbrough, the senior catcher and captain of the ship, has some of the best bat control on the team, according to hitting coach Ritchie Ware. "His defense and leadership are outstanding, but I expect Chuck to have a great year at the plate," commented Ware. Outfielder Kevin Shorter has outstanding power as well, and the

Trojans hope he gets hot because he could really put up some numbers.

Juniors Roger Brown, Mike Miller, Kevin Brown, and Jason Hoefler have remarkable abilities and will be exciting to watch the next two years. During hitting 16 home runs last year, Roger is looking to increase to even bigger numbers. Slick-fielding Miller will combine with Hood to be one of the Conference's best Middle infields. Junior transfer Kevin Brown will lead off for the Trojans in center field. Mid-semester transfer Jason Hoefler joins the team as an outfielder. He is from Kellogg Community College, where he hit .368. Sophomore Mike Clark will also battle for a position in the outfield.

Trevecca brought in some outstanding freshmen for the future of Trojan baseball: Clayton Calicott, catcher, Franklin, TN; Eric Foster, shortstop, Leitchfield, KY; Jeff Sziksai, shortstop, Asheville, NC; Chris Simmons, first baseman, Apopka, FL; Tim Bost, outfield/pitcher, Mason, OH; and Edwin Rodriguez, shortstop, Chicago, IL.

New Recruit for Basketball

by Ritchie Ware

With all the good basketball schools to choose from in the Middle Tennessee State area, it makes it a tough decision for a high school senior to pick the college that will best suit him both in academics and athletics.

After careful consideration of Trevecca, Middle Tennessee State, and Austin Peay State, Torian Daly has signed with Trevecca Nazarene College to continue his education and basketball future.

Torian is a 6'2" guard from Whites Creek High School who is extremely quick and averaged 19 points per game. "We are looking to add quickness to our guard positions and the strengths Torian will bring to our program will be a big asset. I am looking forward to coaching Torian and watching him grow as a student athlete," said Coach Sam Harris of Trevecca. Torian was All-District and was elected to the All-Mid-State Team.

When asked why he chose Trevecca, Torian said, "Because of the academic, the religious background, and the coaching staff." Torian is not just an athlete, but a quality person as well. He is a member of the Who's Who Among High School Students.

Torian's parents are Thomas and Letitia Daly of Nashville. His mother is a 1993 graduate of Trevecca with a degree in Behavioral Science.

Trevecca's Music Department

by John Halburnt

What to listen to? A symphony or a choral tribute to spirituals? A wind ensemble concert or a medieval feast and celebration with the Madrigalians? Contemporary Christian or big band swing? Whatever the choice, Trevecca's Music Department offers all. With a diverse, dedicated faculty, and a number of performing groups, TNC's Music Department gives everyone a chance to get involved in the magical experience of music.

Joanne Taylor, an assistant professor, holds a Masters of Arts and Liberal Studies from Valparaiso University in Indiana. She teaches language diction classes for vocalists as well as music history and music theory classes. She is also the director of the Treble Tones, a women's choir. Professor Taylor's focus in Treble Tones is to expand students' abilities to perform in different styles such as classical, contemporary, jazz, and gospel.

The Concert Choir is a large men and women's choir directed by Dr. Brian Killian. Dr. Killian is an Associate Professor with a Doctorate from Combs College of Music. He plays the organ in chapel when he is not busy teaching piano or directing the Concert Choir.

A new face on campus in the Music Department is Paul Christianson. As assistant professor, Mr. Christianson has a Masters Degree from the University of Idaho and is currently working on his Doctorate. Professor Christianson plays the piano in chapel when he is not teaching his Fine Arts class or private piano lessons. Professor Christianson has previously been involved with four music departments and thinks that Trevecca's is the "smoothest running" and has a "great atmosphere to work in."

Dr. Steve Farnsley received his Doctorate of the Arts from Ball State University in Indiana, and has been required to participate in a forum open to all students. This forum was followed by a pizza party sponsored by SGA. During this event, the candidates were given an opportunity to campaign and converse with the students who were in attendance.

The results of the elections were released the Saturday after the election day. The results are as follows: President - Holly Miller; Vice-President - Jenni Pennell; Executive Secretary General - Keri Attig; Vice-President of Social Life - Stacy Calton; Vice-President of Academic Affairs - Chris Priest; Vice-President of

The 1994-95 SGA office members clearly demonstrate the enthusiasm necessary to continue the improvements that the current offices have introduced to our Student Government Association. Although some officers may be a little wacky (Lisa Coffey) and others a little more serious (Keri Attig), the new SGA team promises to be successful at leading the student body in another adventurous year.

Director of Bands at Trevecca since 1981. Dr. Farnsley supervises student teachers and directs Trevecca's wind ensemble and stage band. He is also the Department's Director of Music Business. Another band program available to Trevecca students is the Vanderbilt Marching Band. "The hope of the band program at TNC," says Dr. Farnsley, "is to provide a transition from the high school band experience to an adult approach to music, which would contribute to the musical life of the church and community."

With a Doctorate of Musical Arts from the Southern Baptist Seminary, Dr. Timothy Cierpke is Professor of Music. The Choral Union is a men's and women's choir that is active in the spring semester under his direction. Dr. Cierpke is also director of the Madrigalians, a small vocal group that has two major performances per year: the Chamber Concert in the fall, and a Medieval dinner in the spring. The Trevecca College and Community Orchestra is another group that Dr. Cierpke directs. An accomplished vocalist and cellist, Dr. Cierpke also teaches private voice and strings lessons.

The Trevecca Ambassadors is a men's choir directed by Professor Fred Mund, and has had the privilege to go on four international tours in eleven countries. This choir is known for its spiritual numbers, but also performs sacred classics as well as hymn music.

Men's chorus music from Wales, which was picked up on one of their tours, is also featured by the Ambassadors.

Professor Mund is also chairperson of the Music Department. He has degrees from Olivet Nazarene College and Butler University, and has completed residency and course requirements at Peabody College in Nashville.

The Music Department has big plans for the future, according to Professor

Mund. One goal is to have one hundred majors in the Department. Another goal under consideration is the add to the Masters Program degrees in commercial/gospel music, music therapy, and sacred music. If a Masters Degree for sacred music would be added, Trevecca would be the only school in the area as well as the only Nazarene school to offer it. One of the Department's biggest and most ambitious goals is a new music building. The new building would include

larger classrooms and practice rooms as well as a larger performance hall. This performance hall would also double as chapel. A larger studio would be a part of the new building, adding video recording and production facilities in time. A feasibility study for this future building and equipment needs has already been done and although not quite confirmed, the new music building is a possibility in the future.

With a rich and varied tradition and eyes on the future, Trevecca's Music Department is ready to expand. Professor Mund feels that, "With good use of our facilities, our perfect location (Music City), a dedicated staff, and the quality of our students, we will set the pace for other Nazarene colleges."

The Music Department will set standards for the future and, as always, provide a thoughtful and exciting program of music for years to come.

Honors Banquet: A Tribute to Craig Keen

by Kenneth Couchman

In the four-year history of the Trevecca Honors Program, there has not been an evening comparable to that of March 24, 1994. On this evening, faculty, professors, and students in the program gathered in the President's dining room for a special banquet. Considering that members of the first class of the Honors Program are now seniors, and that the 4-semester program will be terminated after the current freshman class finishes next year, the banquet was a time to gather as a unified group of students whose view of the world has been altered by the integrative approach to learning that the program offers.

However, the banquet had a second and more meaningful purpose as well. It was also secretly organized to honor Craig Keen, who has taught philosophy in the Honors Program and will be leaving Trevecca this summer to teach at Olivet Nazarene University.

At the conclusion of the banquet meal, this aspect of the gathering was revealed to Doctor Keen. What followed was an indescribable series of tributes from students, professors, and administrators. Speakers addressed such topics as the influence of Doctor Keen on their own lives and academic pursuits. Others expressed their great appreciation for his willingness to listen and counsel. Some conveyed that it was through Doctor Keen that they came to a deeper, more meaningful understanding of God and what Christ means to them individually. Regardless of their topic, however, each speaker expressed a sincere and entirely honest appreciation for Doctor

Craig Keen with a "mix" of gifts

Keen and the undeniable impact he has made on their lives.

The banquet concluded with the presentation of two gifts to Doctor Keen. The first was given by the current freshman Honors class. It was a trophy entitled "Cow in a Blender," an allusion to the Professor's unique method of describing chaos. The second was a plaque presented to him by Trevecca in appreciation for his work with the Honors Program.

Indisputably, the evening was an unforgettable expression of respect and love for a true friend. Reflecting on her admiration for Doctor Keen, Kris Smerick articulated a statement that gives an accurate outlook to Professor Keen's departure: "I'm obviously not happy that Craig's leaving, but I am glad that students at Olivet will get the opportunity to know him and love him as I do—as a Teacher in the most meaningful Kierkegaardian sense of the word." Those of us who know Doctor Keen know that Olivet will never be the same.

President Reed: An Interview with the Pastor

by Jason Vickers

President M. Reed

"As I emerged from college, I assumed that I was pretty well prepared for the pastorate. I had led the Student Prayer Band at my college, debated successfully against the Harvard debate team, and been named as the outstanding graduating student."

"With ego firmly in place, I accepted the pastorate of a small congregation in a county seat town in Northwest Missouri, population around fifteen hundred, assuming that they would be duly impressed with me."

Dr. Reed goes on to say, "Within a year's time I came to understand that the ten to fifteen people who gathered in the converted store-front building each week were not impressed with my abilities; nor was the extended community."

Indeed, narcissism is the inherent companion of youth. Fortunately, with the ancient of days comes wisdom and understanding. Intellectual awareness, keen insight, and sound judgment are the by-products of experience.

Following thirty-five years of ministry, Dr. Reed has discovered another by-product of experience. Opportunity. However, opportunity has not evaded Dr. Reed in the past. Three decades of concentrated ministerial activity have yielded frequent highlights.

Dr. Reed has rendered his services as a professor at Trevecca, Olivet, and NTS. His career has not been restricted to the fields of education and homiletics, but maintains extensions into film-making and occasional penmanship. Dr. Reed has contributed to the home ministerial training program through his creation of a Pastoral training video for Nazarene Headquarters.

Furthermore, he has written books on stewardship, church growth, practices, worship for Advent, and soul winning.

As the Nazarene Book Committee seeks to offer a text in Pastoral Theology, it is their desire to obtain an author from within the denomination. In seeking to bestow such an opportunity upon someone, their essential qualification has been summed up in one word. Experience.

Upon review of qualified candidates, President Reed's experience has emerged as adequate to meet the task at hand. In coordination with his efforts to respond to their request, Dr. Reed is once again entering the teaching field. At the outset of fall semester, 1994, one will be able to locate Dr. Reed in front of the Pastoral Ministry chalkboard, drawing from his experience, and sharing his opportunity.

As Dr. Reed commences to write a Pastoral Theology text, he will not be relying on erudition alone. In a word, he will be appealing to the two-fold source of prior scholarship and self-evaluated experience — experience only acquired in county seat towns with limited opportunities. The experience of yesterdays accede opportunity for today, the dividends of which we are seldom able to see until tomorrow.
