The DARDA

Presenting the story of our quest for knowledge—how we found it—how we made some bit of it ours—how we were made better and happier for the seeking.

TREVECCA NAZARENE
COLLEGE

NASHVILLE 4, TENNESSEE

1946

May 17, 1946, we will remember as the day on which Brother L. D. Shelton, our Dean of Men, was called Home to his reward. He left us with no question as to his preparation for the departure, and so we do not sorrow as those who have no hope. But we know that Trevecca has lost one of the best men that ever came on a college campus. We cannot forget his Christian example; his fervent, consecrated soul that inspired all of us to accomplish greater things for our Lord. We know that we cannot bring him back, but the prayer of our hearts is that we may be counted among the faithful and may some day go to him.

I N M E M O R I A M

From morning to night a busy time, but a happy one. . . . The bell at 6:45. . . . A roommate to insist that it is time to get up. . . . Breakfast. . . . Beds to make. . . . Prayermeeting at 7:30. . . . Class at 8. . . . The thrill of Devotions before beginning class. . . . Notes to take on lectures. . . . Interesting and exciting discussions. . . . Tests on what was to have been learned. . . . A letter from home. . . . Maybe a package too. . . . Another bell. . . . Chapel at eleven. . . . A visiting speaker. . . . The rush for dinner and then the inevitable line. . . . Moments on the campus with the "best friend." . . . Classes and then more classes. . . . The library and silence. . . . Work. . . . Music lesson. . . . Physical Ed. . . . Club meetings. . . . Class get-togethers. . . . Outings. . . . Plans for projects. . . . Supper. . . . A cold drink at Lehman's. . . . Maybe hamburger steak at O'Donniley's. . . . Another bell. . . . Time for chorus . . . or missionary prayermeeting . . . or the revival service . . . or a girls' meeting . . . or study hall. . . . Release at 9:30. . . . "Junior Class sandwiches!" . . . "Laundry! Dry cleaning!" . . . Measles on the first floor. . . . Gobs of gab with neighbors. . . . A prank or two. . . . Hall prayermeeting. . . . Ten o'clock. . . . And then, too soon, ten thirty. . . . And that familiar voice insisting "time for lights out!" . . .

That was your day, your year at Trevecca, and you loved it. You did those things, only you could add a lot more. Every minute was good. But you were so busy working and studying (real sure about that?) and having a wonderful time that you didn't have time to realize what it was meaning to you to be here. Now the year is over. Maybe you'll come back for another year—maybe you won't. Maybe you graduated this year. . . . Maybe you're beginning that long-dreamed-of career. . . . Maybe . . . well, just maybe 'most anything . . . but one thing sure is that you are remembering Trevecca and the benediction it has added to your life. And so we present this book to you so that you may never have reason to forget the happy times you have spent with us—so that if otherwise you might forget the ties which bind you to the good, you may look and remember and feel yourself being gripped a little tighter and made better. It was a wonderful year! Thanks for coming and doing your part and adding your bit to the memories which will always make our lives happy.

Foreword

This year again it has been our privilege to associate with this great soul. His words of instruction have thrilled our hearts. His interest in the work of our Christ has brought to us courage and a vision of what might be done. We have found his judgment good and his soul sincere and we have prayed often that we might be as kind and humble as he has been. Although we have not come to know him as well as we would prefer, we are convinced that Brother Wise is a man of God and that he has made our lives richer. As a token of our appreciation, our love and interest, we dedicate the Nineteen Forty-Six DARDA to the Rev. H. H. Wise, trusting that in the not-too-distant future we may be able to express more nearly in full our sentiments regarding his ministry and influences on the Trevecca campus.

D E D I C A T I O N

REV. H. H. WISE

ARTHUR BATSON, of Avon Park, Florida, attended college at Trevecca in 1940-41. While on a bombing mission over Germany his plane was riddled with machine gun bullets. No definite report concerning his death was made.

EARLE FRIEND, of Huntington, West Virginia, was a student in Trevecca High School in 1935-36, though he worked here longer. His call Home came January 13, 1945, while he was serving his country in France.

JULIUS CURTIS, of Erin, Tennessee, received his junior college diploma from Trevecca in June, 1939. He was a servant of our Christ at home, during his naval training, and in the midst of the horrors of war. He was ushered in to his reward on May 26, 1945, while on duty somewhere in the South Pacific.

EUGENE E. POWELL, of Lexington, Kentucky, was a high school student at Trevecca in 1943. He was cheerful, optimistic, and devoted to his Lord. The climax to his duties came on April 27, 1945, while he was in service in Germany.

JAMES C. SIMPSON, of Tennessee, was a much-loved student at Trevecca, singing in the quartet for several years and taking part in various activities. He entered the service of his country in February of 1944; he was taken from us in August, 1945, while serving in Germany.

MAX SLOAN, of Paris, Tennessee, attended Trevecca High School in 1933-34. He left the United States in November, 1941, as a member of the Army Air Corps. The report came in 1942 that he was missing in action; following V-J day his family received word that he had been killed.

With the families and friends of these noble men we sorrow and linger to breathe a prayer. O God, we pause to count anew the debt we owe to those who have given their all that peace might be ours. Bless the memory of these Thine own who have given as Thou hast given—their all. And grant that in Thine own way Thy best may be returned to them and to theirs.

A TRIBUTE

To the Sons of

T R E V E C C A

His has been the faith to see what might be done, the wisdom with which to plan it, and the patience to see that it was done. He came to Trevecca when there was scarcely a place for him, but has made a place for himself—so much so that his spirit has permeated the campus and he has won the heart of every student with whom he has associated. He asked of us nothing but that we be good young people and that we "go to the top;" he would be surprised if he knew how often we ask of God the strength and wisdom to attain those heights which he has given us glimpses of during the moments of our contacts with him.

A. B. MACKEY, President
NASHVILLE 4, TENNESSEE

Student of 1946
Trevecca Nazarene College
Nashville 4, Tennessee

Dear Trevecca Student:

You are to be congratulated for selecting a Nazarene college because your teachers are men and women of the finest Christian character. Not only do they rank high in Christian character but in scholarship. They have degrees from the outstanding colleges in America--Ball State, University of Oklahoma, Vanderbilt, Peabody, University of Kentucky, and others. Certainly those colleges and universities couldn't question the scholastic standing of Trevecca College; if they did they would be questioning their own standing.

You are to be congratulated because you have students to associate with who are among the best in character, personality, and calling. There is no call higher than the call to Christian service.

We congratulate those of you who have stayed long enough to finish your college course and trust that your stay with us has inspired you to continue your education even to the doctor's degree. We need more consecrated young people who go to the top educationally.

We covet for you the richest of God's blessings and we trust that the Lord will make to grow in the garden of your life those flowers whose beauty and fragrance will be a blessing to all with whom you come in contact.

Yours in His service,

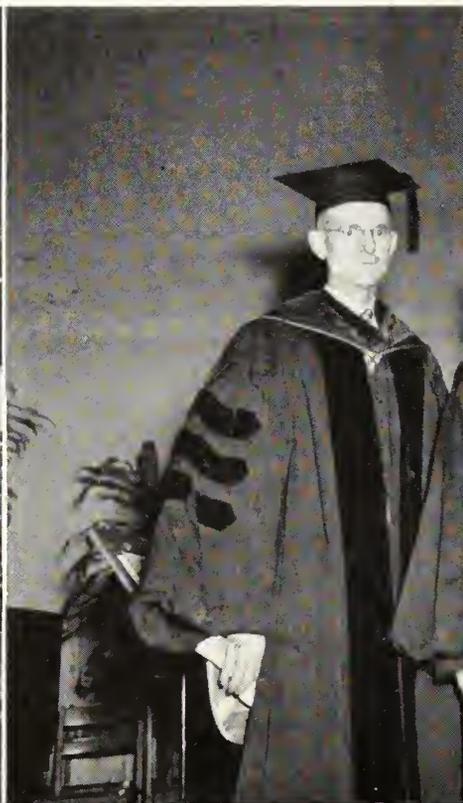

A. B. Mackey

COMMENCEMENT PROCESSION

DR. MACKEY

C H A P E L

Only an hour a day, five days a week, but it has done more than scarcely any other influence during the school year to shape our destinies and to give us certainty as we project our thinking into the future. From week to week we have met in our college auditorium Monday through Friday at eleven, eager to know the details of the service, and equally inquiring as to the message and its effect on our thinking and our plans—concerned as to whether or not it would help us find the answers to some of the questions which bothered us but could not be expressed. And here in our songs and our prayers, in our testimonies and the messages we have found some of the answers for which we have sought. It would be difficult to say just what it has meant to have our faculty members before us on the platform—what it has meant to have appear before us various ones of our own number to sing and to thrill our hearts with melody and the truths presented—what it has added to our lives to be brought into such close contact with some of the leading evangelists, lecturers, and pastors of our church. Perhaps it would be impossible to say how much those things have mattered—perhaps it is not necessary for us to say or to know—but not one of us can forget the surge of new courage we have received in those hours, nor can we regret that we have sat with our classmates from day to day and with them have seen a vision of what we could do—that we have gathered around the altar at the close of services and resolved anew to do our share of the task. Whether it was an informal talk about keeping paper picked up around the buildings or a masterly sermon on the glories of the plan of salvation, day by day we felt our store of knowledge increased, and believed that we were making a faint bit of progress toward the person we wanted to become, and we gained a more reasonable hope that some day our search would be proved successful. And so from day to day we met, we sang, we prayed, we worshipped, and we were made better for our every gathering.

Some of the out-of-town speakers for the year have been:
 Dr. Hugh C. Benner, President, Nazarene Theological Seminary, Kansas City, Mo.
 Rev. Carl M. Brown, Pastor, Church of the Nazarene, Old Hickory, Tenn.
 Rev. Raymond Browning, Evangelist, Former District Superintendent, North Carolina.
 Dr. Russell V. DeLong, Head of Department of Philosophy and Evangelism, Nazarene Theological Seminary.
 Rev. Bona Fleming, Evangelist.
 Mrs. Lilly Galloway, W. C. T. U. Representative.
 Rev. U. E. Harding, Evangelist.
 Rev. L. B. Hicks, Evangelist.
 Rev. Don Irwin, Graduate, Asbury Seminary, Wilmore, Ky.

ADMINISTRATION BUILDING

THIS CAMPUS OF OURS

The Trevecca campus of 1946 is the result of much dreaming, planning, hard work, and sacrifice. Somewhere in Trevecca's future we believe there is a million-dollar campus, that there will be several new buildings, that the campus will extend to the Murfreesboro Road and there will be a private entrance to the school from that highway. But at present we are rejoicing over the completion of the New Administration Building and the improvements made in the other buildings on the campus.

The ground has been broken for the New Men's Dormitory, which will be constructed on the tract of land just east of the present men's dormitory; construction will begin as soon as the money is on hand to start work. Across the road from this building will be the College Hill Church, for which excavation has already been made.

The McClurkan Memorial Building, completed by the fall term in 1942, houses the college classrooms, auditorium, chemistry laboratory, library, music studio and, at present, the grade school. We look forward to the day when we can have a Fine Arts Building, a separate library, and perhaps a science building.

The New Administration Building, constructed on the site of the former administration building which burned in 1943, houses the high school classrooms on the second and the basement floors, and the offices on the first. Those who recall the crowded office Trevecca has had in recent years sigh with gratitude and surprise when they first visit the private offices of the heads of the departments, the president, registrar, financial secretary, and the bookkeeper. Hardwood floors . . . fluorescent lights . . . new desks and chairs . . . new typewriters . . . telephones on the desks . . . privacy and silence—these factors and others make office work a delight and a privilege. In this building is also the Book Store, DARDA Staff Office, Trev-Echoes Office, and a new prayer chapel.

Dormitory accommodations consist of Hardy Hall, for the men, and McKay Hall for the women. In the basement of McKay Hall is the cafeteria, which has rather recently been brick-veneered, and equipped with venetian blinds and a furnace.

Other buildings on the campus consist of the president's home, the Louise Gibbs Apartment (better known as the Gresham Apartment), the College Print Shop, and a barn for the livestock. At various points on the campus floodlights have been erected, so that whether one comes on the grounds during the day and sees the shadows and the charms the sunshine adds or enters at night and receives full benefit of the light's reflection through the trees and across the sloping lawn, either effect is equally beautiful and inspiring.

Truly we appreciate the campus which is ours today, but in the light of the many improvements which have been made in the past few months and the recent years we can see no reason for our not soon having such facilities as would be second to none as compared to the plant of any other Nazarene college.

THEORY AND APPLICATION

Our theory of education is that it is not merely a matter of committing to memory some words other people have said or thought, but that it is a means whereby we may learn the better way of doing those things which should be done in the world, with the end that we may learn to do them and at the same time find for ourselves the maximum happiness.

Our school days are taken up with study, with now and then the inevitable test and exam. There is the search in the library for materials, the routine of preparing for classes, writing papers, and the aftermath of anxiety as to grades on report cards. Sometimes it seems that life will all be this sort of thing—a round of discussing theories and ideas, of rehearsing what has been done or said or thought, and a matter of keeping oneself aloof from the world that is doing and saying things we repeat in poll-parrot fashion. But when we think more sensibly we know that is not true. We know that in a few years we are to be a part of that world which seems so far away to us now—that in a few more months we are to take our places in the march of our nation's progress and that from there on out we are to be men and women. We think of those things and for a moment imagine the glories of those days to come, but our eyes return to our lessons and we remember that the assignment for eight in the morning is not yet finished and this is not the time for dreaming.

Have students throughout the past felt this way about school, and almost wanted to quit now to enter that throng of men and women who they thought were doing the noble things, never realizing that they themselves were enjoying the greatest opportunity the world has known? Yes, I think they have. I think it is a universal fact that we are eager to begin our practice but that we are not so happy to spend the hours necessary to learn the theory which should be the basis of our practice. Perhaps if we could see that relationship between the theory and the application our minds would penetrate deeper into the rich things at our command.

At Trevecca the purpose which the students and the teachers have in mind is that of giving to the world a living proof of the power and the grace of our God. We plan to "go to the top" in the fields of our study, but at the same time we keep our hearts steadfastly on Him who is our Absolute Reality, and we know that through Him we shall conquer.

FRIENDSHIP

In the classroom and the dorm, at work and at public gatherings we met our friends and came to know and to love them. At first it surprised us to see so many other young people who had the same pattern of convictions and the same standard of a good time. Before we came to Trevecca we had the idea that Christian young people could not ever have such good times, but here we have learned how incorrect that idea was.

We have had picnics, taken hikes, gone out to eat, attended lectures or services in town, talked and studied under the trees on the campus, played the piano and sung, enjoyed a game on the tennis court, attended Friday night programs with a "special person," and done so many other things. Through it all we have felt the ties of friendship drawing us closer and closer to one another and we have sensed the genuine joy of fellowship.

To us they were just boys and girls—classmates. In a few years we shall meet again on other occasions, but they will not be just boys and girls then but men and women, and they will be the leaders in our church or persons outstanding in other professions. We will meet them and will recognize their abilities and will, with a twinkle in our eyes, remember our happy times together during this past year.

Our association with these select persons—our leaders in the making—has been of untold value to us in our efforts to formulate our own ideals and the various parts of a life philosophy. These with whom we have worked and played, studied and worshipped, have helped to weave a rich design in the tapestry of our young lives, and we are grateful to them and to God for our privilege of attending a holiness school with them, though for such a short time it was.

"The subdued breathings forth of a violin or the impassioned stress of a mighty chorus—give to either of them the soul of the poet who would give his message to the world, and your heart and mine will thrill with the music presented. In our hearts the melody will resound throughout the days to come and we will feel ourselves better for the listening."

At Trevecca we endeavor to say with music those thoughts and emotions which we have not the power to express otherwise. Perhaps it is an anthem, a hymn, or a classic, but whatever the selection and the medium, our musicians endeavor to experience the raptures of the poet and composer and to give to the world a song which will live through the days to come.

Our singers are frequently called upon to assist with public services at various churches, take part in programs at local schools, contribute their part to a service at the jail or work-houses or add the artistic touch to formal occasions. And wherever they go, these ministers of song woo the hearts of the people to God and to thoughts of His Kingdom.

STUDENT WORK

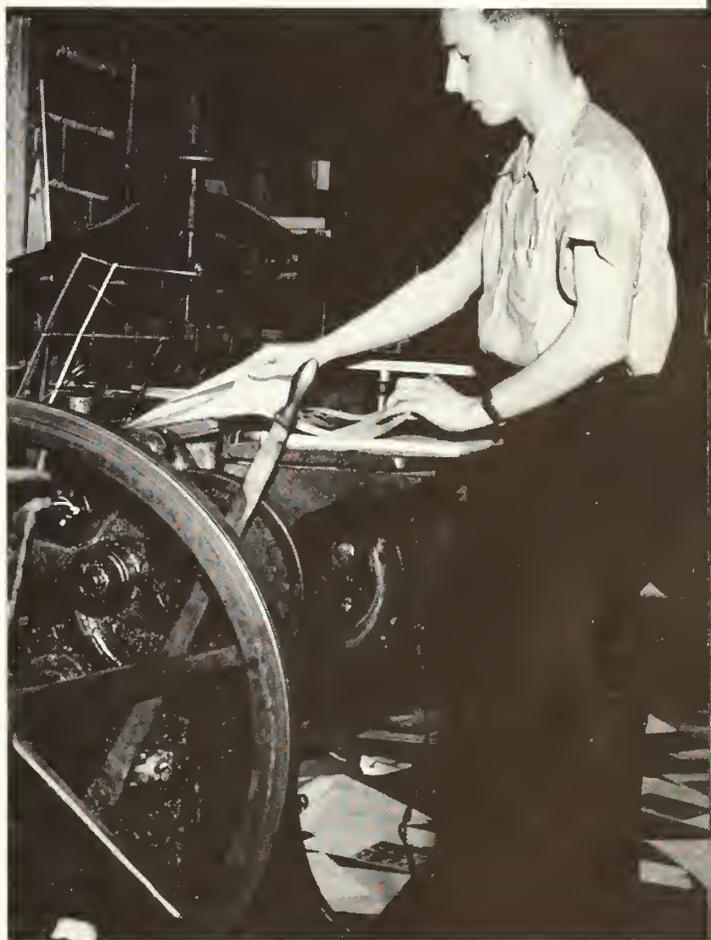

Who said it is a disgrace to work? We don't think so at Trevecca, I assure you. Nearly every member of our student body works at some task to help pay his expenses. The hours which a student works during the week may range from forty to less than one, but the average would be three or four hours, probably.

Various jobs there are to be done—not all of them easy or inviting, but when a person wants an education and knows he must work to get it, he decides he can do almost anything.

Some of our students have special abilities whereby they merit office positions; some few select persons assist in the library. Others sing over soapbuds, clean classrooms, keep dormitory halls spic-an'-span, do the milking, or help beautify the campus. And then there is now and then that person who is able to find for himself a job which nobody else has had the ingenuity to see before.

Very few of the students earn all their expenses by work during the school year, for their lessons demand more time than that sort of schedule would leave. For the work which is done, payment is received either in meal tickets, credit toward the expenses for the next quarter, or, under special conditions, in cash.

But we work together and learn to put into practice some of the theories which we are learning in our various classes, and we find that the combination is a very good one.

An hour alone . . . a tower . . . and God—
'Twas then I came to see
In dim outline the lesson God
Had tried to teach me.
That upward gaze . . . the steadfast look
Beyond the daily din,
To God—Then I took heart
And I began again.

I saw her at various times, at as many different scenes, on as many occasions, and always she was a lady. A charming mystery there was about her—a feminine grace that added beauty to my own soul and made me grateful for life and youth.

GLENN CASS Franklin, Tenn.
A.B., English

Sometimes I thought of him as a symbol of the modern age of hurry, for I caught glimpses of him only now and then as he dashed here or there to class or to meet an engagement. But I felt the throb of his faith, saw the goal to which he aspired, and became his friend.

Her quiet manner and calm spirit spoke to me often when I was inclined to be impulsive. I often wondered what thoughts must have occupied her mind, and what beauties were painted in the recesses of her soul. She never told me of them and I was none the wiser, but I could not doubt that she had them, for those thoughts and ideals were reflected in every avenue of her life.

ADA ELIZABETH MIDDLETON . . . Dayton, Ohio

A.B., Religion

Her soul lived anew in every line of poetry she read or bar of music she heard. To her every poet sang his song and stayed for the echo which her soul was sure to return to him. She made the artist thrill with the joy of his art, and gave to the world in which she lived a realization of the pleasure of being alive.

CHRISTEEN MILLER Brooksbury, Ind.

Th.B., Religion

When I was with her sometimes I thought of her as only a schoolgirl, so eager she was to have her share of the prevailing pleasure. But then without notice she changed and I knew that I associated with one who was every whit a woman. I never knew which pose of her I liked best, for she was constantly changing roles. But then it was never necessary for me to decide, for there was woven throughout the tapestry of her life the thread of faith which enhanced the variety her whims presented to me.

THE SENIORS

LEILA DELL MILLER Columbus, Ga.

A.B., English

Whether I saw her proclaiming the Gospel of our Lord, expressing her soul in the pathos of a reading, or delighting in the carefree hour with friends, I recognized in her that ability of leadership which was peculiarly her own. She found joy in sharing with others those influences which had enriched her life, and made our lives the better for associating with her.

EVELYN M. RAMSEY Richmond, Ky.

A.B., Religion

I seldom saw her but that she was coming to or from work or was doing what I should have supposed a trying duty, but she seemed never to consider any task a monotonous one. Rather she maintained that through every avenue possible she was chasing that ideal which she was sure could be attained, and she worked with the hope that at some time she could reach the heights which she had caught glimpses of in her youthful dreamings.

D. HERMAN SPENCER Nashville, Tenn.

A.B., English

He was so near our own age and so much a member of our group at all times that we were not able to fully evaluate his excellencies. We only knew that in whatever activity we engaged he entered and, without meaning to, triumphed. We sensed that his spirit, though unwilling to admit it even to itself, towered so high above our own that the comparison was not pleasant. We whispered among ourselves the heights we were sure he would attain—he dreamed of those heights too, perhaps, but only went about from day to day working, studying, and ascending to the plane which we thought rightly his.

"We aimed to please"

We were surprised when the student-body elected us to produce for them a printed record of our year at Trevecca—and so unsure of our ability to do the task that we hesitated to receive the honor which they meant by the appointment. But there seemed no way out of the responsibility and so we began work.

It has meant long hours—work until, as the song says, "night turns to day;" it has meant pecking on a typewriter when lessons were calling, or trotting around with a photographer when we craved to be doing almost anything else. And it has meant asking for ads and that sort of thing—but we have done it and feel now that it has been good for us. We began our work with such noble plans and dreams—we worked on them eagerly and captured a few of them, but more often than not we saw our ideas evade our grasp and only haunt us with the memories we had of them. Such experiences editors have! But now we have given our words and our pictures final form, and we have begun to breathe more nearly like we remember we did before this invasion of our lives.

We have only one request to make of you who live with us again the days which we represent here—that you will remember that we have tried to be faithful to our mutual aims and that in all we have tried to do that which you would have done in making the book, for THE BOOK IS YOURS!

Only to those who have not been on the campus this year would it be necessary to say what the Trev-Echoes has done to make the year a successful one. Through the medium of these weekly columns the thinkers of the campus have aired their thoughts and spread them to others. In its issues we have been given the news even while it was still happening, and we have become aware of our graces and our failures. Reforms have been suggested and achieved, talents have been discovered and polished, and students and teachers have been brought closer together, thanks to the efforts of the College Junior Class and their work on the Trev-Echoes.

A distinctive feature of a holiness college is that it gathers about itself a group of young people who are preparing for the service of their Master. At Trevecca we have our times of pleasure, the occasional formal gathering, or the more frequent classroom contact, but there is perhaps no assembly in which the hearts of God's chosen ones are touched quite as they are in the gatherings of the Ministerial Association.

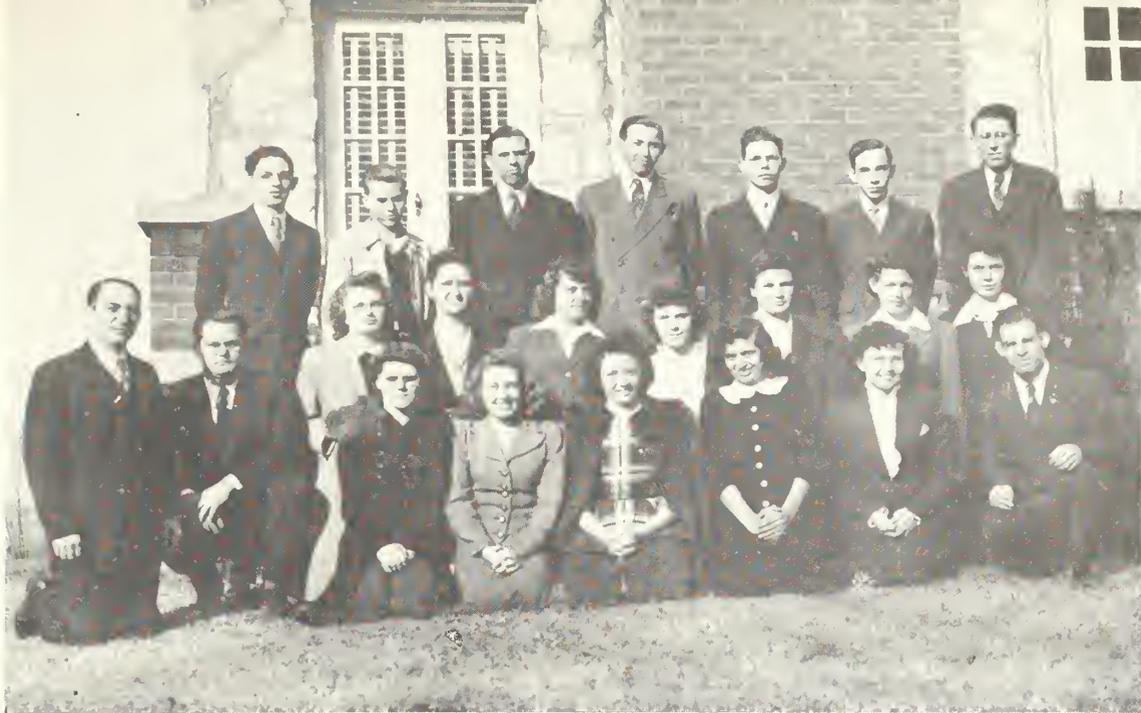

The leaders propose to inspire the students to attain the highest possible goals in efficiency in the Kingdom of God, and to receive the best training for His work. The mutual tugging of the heart toward God and His service helps the group to take new courage for the work of the days to come and to make constructive plans for the service which is to be rendered for the church and for the world—for our Lord.

The activities of the Association during the year have included the sponsorship of chapel services for a week, literary programs, services at churches in the city, and luncheons with various visiting speakers. In the future the group plans to sponsor at least one revival during the year and to take a very active part in the school activities.

Above: The captains of the various departments in which the Trevecca students conduct regular services. These departments and institutions are the white and colored departments of the city and county workhouses and jails, the hospital, jail and juvenile court. A group of singers and speakers attend these services each Sunday and bring the message of salvation to those who might not otherwise hear it. Many are the persons who are thus led to Christ and are made new creatures in Him.

Below: The students who are ordained elders, or ministers with local or district license to preach the Gospel. These students are, almost to a person, actively engaged in the work of the ministry, either by participation in the services of the city institutions or in week-end services in the neighboring churches. Several of the men have charges of their own and conduct an average of two or three services a week in addition to their classwork.

Trevecca truly gave of her own when came the call of the nation to arm for international conflict. She sent to the front her dozens of men and, when it was demanded, paid the last full measure of devotion. And she has hung within her walls a memorial of those men who represented her on the fields of battle.

Another call to war has sounded. The forces of right have gone out to battle against the forces of wrong. Trevecca's men and women have heard the din of warfare and have received a summons from the Commander to join His ranks. She must send her dozens and her hundreds of soldiers armed for battle and she must support them with her prayers. And she must hang in her halls somewhere a memorial of those who have represented her on these fields of warfare.

S N A P S

It was morning and we entered our college day with joyful anticipation of the activities we would complete, the dreams we would capture and make a part of our lives—and so we worked.

At noon we paused for refreshment and for the association with friends. We delighted in the presence of companions and renewed the bonds which held us to the better things. And we went to work again.

It is night now. Our day has ended and we face that which we know not. But we go forward with a firm faith in Him who has gone before us. We do not know the path, but to know our Guide is enough and we will go on.

I know of a church at the edge of the town
Where heaven and earth seem to blend;
For within the wide door waits the Christ we adore
With a blessing for all who attend.

They come to the church at the edge of the town
And join with the worshipping throng,
And tomorrow you'll face with a confident grace
And a faith that is steadfast and strong.
